Assoc. Prof. Dr. Radka Symonová, University of South Bohemia

Molecular genome evolution analysed by AI

Working on eukaryotic genomes generates huge amounts of data with almost endless opportunity to apply AI. One such direction of our research is search for large- and small-scale patterns in fish and mammalian genomes, that differ in some so far not fully understood traits. Resolving the associated issues will considerably improve our understanding of mammalian and including human genome function.